Act LXV of 1990
on Local Self-Governments

In consideration of the progressive self-government traditions of our country and the basic requirements of the European Charter of Local Self-Government, Parliament recognizes and protects the rights of local communities to exercise self-government.

Local self-governance makes it possible for the local electorate to manage local affairs - directly or through its elected local self-government - independently and democratically.

By supporting the self-organizing independence of local communities, Parliament will help create the necessary conditions for self-governance and promote the democratic decentralization of public authority.

In order to realize these goals, Parliament enacts the following Act:

Chapter I

General Rules of LOCAL SELF-Government

Municipal Rights

(1) The self-governments of villages, towns, counties, the capital and the capital's districts (hereinafter referred to as "local self-government") shall act independently in local public affairs within their scope of responsibilities and jurisdiction (hereinafter referred to as "public affair").

(2) Public affairs constitute providing local residents with public utilities, locally exercising public power through self-government and creating the organizational, personnel and financial conditions for these.

(3) Local self-governments may - within the framework of this Act - independently regulate and in certain cases freely manage the public affairs that fall within their jurisdiction. Their decisions may be overruled by the Constitutional Court and the courts but only if such decisions involve an infringement of law.

(4) Local self-governments may - by decision of the elected council or by local referendum - independently and voluntarily undertake to resolve any public affair that is not allocated upon any other authority by statutory provision. In public affairs undertaken voluntarily, self-governments may do anything that does not violate the law. The resolution of voluntarily undertaken public affairs may not endanger the performance of the municipal powers and responsibilities statutorily prescribed by this Act.

(5) The statutory powers and responsibilities of local self-governments may be prescribed by an act of Parliament, in which case Parliament shall also designate the financial resources necessary for carrying out such powers and responsibilities and decide on the extent and method of the contribution from the central government budget.

(6) Within the framework of this Act, local self-governments:

a) may independently devise their organizational structure and operating procedures, create symbols of self-government and establish municipal decorations/medals and municipal titles/awards of recognition;

b) may independently dispose of their municipal property and their revenues; they shall operate a single budget from which they shall finance the performance of both voluntary and compulsory municipal responsibilities. They may pursue entrepreneurial activities on their own behalf. The local authorities in localities that are considered underprivileged through no fault of their own are entitled to additional state support;

c) may freely associate with other local self-governments, join regional or national associations for the representation and protection of their interests; within the scope of their powers and responsibilities they may cooperate with local self-governments abroad and join international self-government organizations.

Section 2.

(1) Local self-governments shall enforce the principle of the sovereignty of the people and, in public affairs, shall express and enforce the public will in a manner both democratic and open.

(2) Self-government decisions may be taken by the local self-government's council - and, if so authorized, its committees, bodies of self-government subdivisions, local minority self-governments, local self-government associations and the mayor - and by local referendums. Under special circumstances, the law may allocate municipal responsibilities and powers to the mayor, the Lord Mayor and the chairman of the county general assembly.

(3) Local self-governments may express their opinions and take an initiative in matters that concern the local community but do not fall within their powers and responsibilities. The competent decision-making authority shall convey its reply (decision) to the local self-government within the deadline set by statutory provision.

Section 3.

The rights of self-governments and the lawful exercise of the powers of self-governments are protected by the Constitutional Court and by courts of law.

Section 4.

The rights of self-governments conferred under Sections 1-3 are equal in respect of each local self-government.

Section 5.

The rights of local self-government belong to the polity of residents in a locality who have the right to vote (hereinafter referred to as 'voters'). Voters exercise their collective rights to self-government through their councilors who have been elected to self-government body and by participating in local referendums.

Powers and Responsibilities

Section 6.

(1) The powers and responsibilities of the self-governments of villages, towns, counties, the capital and the capital's districts (hereinafter referred to as "local authorities") may vary:

a) local self-governments may undertake different powers and responsibilities as best suitable to local needs and capabilities;

b) the powers and responsibilities conferred upon the local self-governments of communities with greater population and capabilities may exceed those of smaller ones. The self-governments of localities with a smaller population may undertake to provide the public services statutorily prescribed for the self-governments of larger communities and/or county governments if they are able to provide them on their own or within their association. In such a case, a local self-government may request funds be appropriated for its budget in an amount that is consistent with the responsibilities it has undertaken.

(2) The powers and responsibilities of local self-governments, whether voluntary or mandatory, cover a wide range of public affairs. Under special circumstances, a public affair may be delegated to the powers and responsibilities of another organization by an act of Parliament.

(3) There is no correlation between local authorities and county self-governments; they shall, however, cooperate on the basis of mutual interests.

Section 7.

(1) Under special circumstances, state administrative authority may be conferred upon the mayor, the Lord Mayor, the chairman of the county general assembly by an act of Parliament or a government decree under authorization by an act. State administration responsibilities and/or regulatory authority may be conferred upon the town clerk, the chief clerk and - under special circumstances - also to the administrator of the council office.

(2) In cases prescribed by an act of Parliament or a government decree under authorization by an act, the mayor, the Lord Mayor and the chairman of the county general assembly shall participate in the direction and execution on local levels of national tasks of state administration relating to national defense, civil defense and emergency response actions.

(3) When carrying out assigned state administration responsibilities or under the regulatory authority conferred in Subsections (1) and (2), the council shall not be entitled to intervene in the actions of the mayor, Lord Mayor, the chairman of the county general assembly; nor may the council override their decisions.
