

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

Promoting Robust Assessment of Civil Society Engagement in the Tanzania EITI Process

The International Center for Not-for-Profit Law (ICNL) invites proposals to develop a submission, in response to the call for views issued in advance of Tanzania's upcoming EITI validation, which addresses civil society engagement and the enabling environment for civil society participation in the EITI process in Tanzania.

Grant amounts are not fixed, but successful proposals will have a budget not exceeding $7,500. Applications are due by December 15, 2021.

Background

The Extractives Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) is the leading global standard for the good governance of oil, gas, and mineral resources. The EITI Standard requires the disclosure of information along the extractive industry value chain: from licensing, to extraction, to management of revenues by government, to the contribution of these revenues to the economy and society. This transparency is meant to support accountability in how a country's natural resources are extracted. Any country with an extractive industry sector is eligible to join the EITI Standard.

The EITI Standard is currently implemented by more than 50 countries, including Tanzania, which has been an EITI member since 2009.

Civil society engagement is essential to the EITI process. Each EITI implementing country has a multi-stakeholder group (MSG) made up of government, civil society, and extractive company representatives. The MSG makes decisions on how the EITI Standard is implemented in the country. More broadly, engagement by civil society representatives outside the MSG is critical to ensuring not only that the EITI Standard is properly implemented to promote transparency in the extractive industry value chain, but that this transparency can be deployed to ensure accountability and good governance of the extractives sector.

The EITI Standard reflects the critical role played by civil society in natural resource governance. Among other requirements, the EITI Standard mandates that implementing countries must ensure that “civil society [is] fully, actively, and effectively engaged in the EITI process,” and that “there is an enabling environment for civil society participation.”¹

EITI reviews country compliance with these requirements through regular assessments known as “validations,” with consequences for countries which fail to comply. Under a new validation procedure recently adopted by the EITI Board, four weeks prior to each validation, the EITI Secretariat will launch a public call for views on stakeholder engagement in the EITI. All submissions in response to this call are due by the commencement of the validation. These calls for views provide an excellent opportunity for CSOs to highlight concerns about civic space in EITI implementing countries and to promote accountability for restrictions imposed on civil society.

Tanzania’s next EITI validation is scheduled to commence on April 1, 2022. We anticipate that a call for submissions relevant to the validation will be issued by the EITI Secretariat on or about March 1, 2022. This call for submissions is likely to follow the format of calls issued for previous validations, accessible here.

Project Activities

The International Center for Not-for-Profit Law (ICNL) invites proposals to develop a submission, in response to the EITI call for views issued in advance of Tanzania’s upcoming validation, which addresses civil society engagement and the enabling environment for civil society participation in the EITI process in Tanzania.

ICNL anticipates that successful proposals may involve the following activities:

1. Review the publication Assessing civil society engagement in the EITI process: A guide to providing validation inputs on EITI Requirement 1.3, developed by ICNL in partnership with Publish What You Pay (PWYP);
2. Review relevant materials relating to Tanzania’s prior validation in 2020;
3. Based on desk research, prepare a short (5-7 page) draft background section in English summarizing the civic space environment in Tanzania, which addresses the issues that the 2021 Validation Guide notes will be considered “for contextual purposes” under EITI Requirement 1.3;
4. Meet and interview civil society groups working on the extractive sector and civic space issues in Tanzania, including local and international CSOs where relevant, to obtain information about:

¹ Per EITI guidance, the “EITI process” includes “expressing views related to EITI activities” and “expressing views related to natural resource governance,” not just participating in EITI meetings, reports, and activities. Moreover, “civil society representatives” are “not limited to members of the multistakeholder group,” but encompass any representatives “substantively involved in the EITI process.” This includes representatives more generally engaged in advocacy about EITI or natural resource governance. So, the EITI Standard requires implementing countries to provide an enabling environment for broader civil society participation in natural resource governance.

- a. inclusion of civil society in EITI meetings, reports, and activities;
 - b. restrictions on civil society engagement in EITI meetings, reports, and activities, and in advocacy regarding natural resource governance;
 - c. concerns about Tanzania’s 2020 validation report and the rating for civil society engagement (“satisfactory progress”); and
 - d. critiques of the EITI process or how restrictions on civic freedoms are being deployed against civil society engaged in the EITI process; and
5. Prepare a draft report in English (10-15 pages) addressing the following questions in the context of Tanzania’s participation in EITI:
- a. Are civil society organizations able to engage in public debate related to the EITI process and express opinions about the EITI process without restraint, coercion or reprisal?
 - b. Are civil society representatives able to operate freely in relation to the EITI process?
 - c. Are civil society representatives able to communicate and cooperate with each other regarding the EITI process?
 - d. Are civil society representatives able to be fully, actively and effectively engaged in the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of the EITI process?
 - e. Are civil society representatives able to speak freely on transparency and natural resource governance issues, and ensure that the EITI contributes to public debate?
6. By April 1, 2021, based on input from ICNL as appropriate, revise the draft background section and report prepared under #3 and #5, and submit this combined final submission (15-25 pages) to the EITI Secretariat.

This list represents one approach to development of a submission, and ICNL encourages applicants to propose alternative approaches to the development of an EITI submission. Regardless of the approach proposed, the submission must be provided to the EITI Secretariat by April 1, 2022. Proposals should have a budget not exceeding $7,500.

Application Instructions

To apply for a grant, applicants must submit the following items in English:

- Application coversheet (see below);
- Proposal (no more than five pages);
- Line-item budget (no more than USD $7,500); and
- Resumes/CVs of person(s) responsible for the proposed project.

Applicants are also encouraged, as feasible, to submit an English-language writing sample (no more than 20 pages), preferably addressing a policy or legal topic.

Content of Proposal

In five pages or less, please describe your proposal to develop a submission, in response to the call for views issued in advance of Tanzania's upcoming EITI validation, which addresses civil society engagement and the enabling environment for civil society participation in the EITI process in Tanzania.

Please ensure that your proposal includes the following information:

- A clear description of proposed activities;
- Proposed activity plan and timeline for the project, which must result in provision of a submission to the EITI Secretariat by April 1, 2022;
- Resources to be consulted in conducting activities;
- Civil society groups working on the extractive sector and civic space issues in Tanzania, including local and international CSOs, to be engaged in activities;
- Applicant's relevant experience. This should include, as appropriate: (1) any experience working on issues relating to civic space and/or natural resource governance, including the EITI process, in Tanzania; (2) any experience with and connections to civil society groups working on civic space and natural resource governance issues in Tanzania; and (3) any experience developing technical submissions or reports in English.

Please also attach a line-item budget (does not count toward the 5-page limit for the proposal). Successful proposals will have a budget not exceeding $7,500.

Eligibility Requirements

Open to any not-for-profit organization, civil society representative, academic, or other partner with experience with civil society and natural resource governance in Tanzania. Proposals from community-based organizations and organizations representing marginalized groups are encouraged. Applicants should be based in Tanzania.

Selection Criteria

Applications will be evaluated based on the following factors:

- Compliance with eligibility requirements and application procedures;
- Detail and reasonableness of project proposal;
- Experience working on, and developing technical submissions or reports relating to, civic space and/or natural resource governance in Tanzania;

- Extent of networks with civil society groups working on civic space and natural resource governance issues in Tanzania; and
- Demonstrated ability to develop technical submissions or reports in English.

How to Apply

Interested applicants can apply by completing the application coversheet and submitting it, along with all required documents, by email (see instructions below).

Additional Information

Prior to receiving their final grant disbursement, the grant recipient will be required to document submission of a final report to the EITI Secretariat, by no later than April 1, 2021, which addresses civil society engagement and the enabling environment for civil society participation in the EITI process in Tanzania.

Please contact us via email at africa@icnl.org should you have questions.

Deadline

Applications will be accepted on a rolling basis until December 15, 2021. Due to the number of expected applications, only shortlisted candidates will be contacted.

Application Coversheet

Please complete the coversheet and submit it, along with your proposal and other application documents, to africa@icnl.org. Please ensure that the subject of your email is "EITI Tanzania Validation Submission -- Grant Application 2021."
